Use this web site to access full-texts of magazines, newspapers and scholarly journals in a wide variety of subject areas and academic levels. There are resources for children, encyclopedias, literary, business, and medical sources and more.

1. Enter the web site above. If you are accessing these databases from home, you will be required to use your library barcode and last name or enter your username and password which you create for yourself. Registration is free.

2. Click on the name of the database you wish to search. Many of the databases use the search screen shown here. Click on EBSCOHost Database Collection for an option to search several databases at once.

3. Type in your topic in the search box provided. You may limit your search to a magazine title, date and to full text, if you wish. Take note of other options such as searching for terms within the text of the article.

4. You will get a list of results. Many, but not all, of the articles will be available as full text. Click on the article title to view, print or e-mail it.

5. A handy feature is the use of the folder on the top right of the screen. This allows you to e-mail and print more than one article at a time.

6. For multiple articles, click on the "add" option next to the articles you wish to print or e-mail.

Click on your folder to proceed with printing and e-mailing options.

Note PDF option. Check this box if applicable.

In addition to Abstracts or summaries, a citation can include HTML Full Text (the complete article) and PDF (article image)

7. Some notes on PDF (Portable Document Files): You must open PDF files before you can print them. This is to your advantage since a file of this type can be much larger than you want to print or e-mail. Some can be quite lengthy, including pictures and other graphics. You can e-mail PDF files without opening them first. A PDF file should be sent as a separate attachment. Adobe Acrobat Reader software is necessary to open and view PDF files.

There is an option to "estimate the number of pages" before you print. You can print just a few of the pages if you wish.

If you have any problems or questions when using MARVEL, please contact the library at 646-8181.
